Atlantis launch postponed until Monday; weather a concern

The launch of Space Shuttle Atlantis has been postponed until no earlier than Monday, while weather forecasters and the STS-112 mission management team assess the possible effect Hurricane Lili may have on the Mission Control Center at Johnson Space Center in Houston. No technical issues or concerns are being worked on the launch vehicle.

Spot bid sale is 9 a.m.-2 p.m. Tuesday. For more information, see 'Inside Marshall'
